THE LIBRARY

THE ARC

Hello and Welcome to Jefferson Laboratory Library's history...

HISTORY:

- 1962 - Library originates as the engineering library for the Virginia Association Research Campus of William and Mary
- 1985 – Library changes ownership and is known as the CEBAF library, beginning it's 25 years of service to the lab
- 1992 – The Old card catalog is retired and the new online patron catalog is promoted.
- 1998 - Library relocates from the VARC to the ARC as is known as Thomas Jefferson National Accelerator Facility. In short, Jefferson Laboratory (JLab) Library.
- 2001 – Library transforms from paper to an electronic technical information reporting system with access to an electronic OPAC, online databases and electronic journals supplied by Vendors. A new Automated Library Management system, known as Voyager, is also implemented. The Library URL becomes: <http://www.jlab.org/IR> and is know as Information Resources.
- 2005 – Records and Publications is recognized as an entity of its own.
- 2006 – Jefferson Laboratory merges with CRC and becomes Jefferson Science Associates (JSA).
- 2010 – Pioneer papers, interview audio tapes and the science education series VHS tapes are digitized.
- 2011 – Library has a “new look” with less shelf space and transitions into an electronic library focusing more on electronic books (eBooks) and electronic journals (eJournals).
- 2011- An Information Commons room evolves.
- 2011 –A Self Check station is set up for after hours circulation of materials.
- 2012 – Mobile access is encouraged and App resources linked from the library webpage.
