

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: What will happen if all of my responses are, "No"?

A: Your registration and access will be approved. There will be no requirement to contact Occupational Medicine.

Q: If I haven't been to China, why do my symptoms matter?

A: If you are potentially contagious because of a non-corona virus illness, your access might be delayed. In addition, if the outbreak worsens it might become feasible for an individual to be infected in other countries.

Q: If I haven't been to China, why do you ask whether I've had contact with a person who has the virus?

A: As mentioned above, if the outbreak worsens it might become feasible for an individual to be infected in other countries.

Q: What happens if I have had a fever or cough during the 14 day period?

A: You will be required to call Occupational Medicine to discuss details. If you are determined to be contagious we will delay your site access until that risk falls. Details such as severity and duration of your symptoms determine risk of contagion.

Q: What if I have had contact with a case?

A: We will restrict your access until 14 days since your last contact. In addition, we will inform our local Public Health Department so they can follow-up as appropriate.
